

Texting & Driving ... It Can Wait: BFF Pledge

Take a look at the last text message you received. Was it something like WUD tonight? Or Hw r u? Would reading or responding to that text message while driving be worth getting into an accident?

When you look at it that way, there's no text that couldn't wait. Take the lead by following the four simple tips below, and then pledge not to text and drive.

- Be smart. Never text while driving. No text message is worth being distracted and getting into an accident.
- Be caring. Never send a text message to a friend that is driving to meet you, or to anyone you know is likely behind the wheel.
- Be in control. Remember it's your phone. You decide if and when to send and read texts so take control. Consider turning your phone off, setting it to silent or even storing it in the glove box before hitting the road.
- Be a true BFF. Friends don't let each other text and drive.
